

First Aid Procedures

Workers who sustain a job-related injury or illness, regardless of seriousness, are required to immediately report it to their supervisor and the first aid attendant for treatment and recording. The first aid attendant will be in charge of all first aid treatment of injured workers until medical aid is available and will promptly provide workers with the level of care within the scope of their training and regulations. Supervisory personnel will not attempt to overrule the first aid attendant's decisions related to first aid or emergency transportation. If required or requested by the first aid attendant, call for an ambulance (911) and provide as much information as possible.
